the moment autumn arrives collection

lac-des-îles. entrelacs. laurentians. québéc. canada.

There is a moment each year when the landscape begins to whisper that autumn has arrived.

It is not announced by the calendar, but rather by a subtle shift in the light, a gentle coolness in the morning air, and the first golden leaves dancing against a summer sky. It is a moment of anticipation, when nature prepares to reveal one of its most extraordinary transformations.

Across the Canadian landscape, forests awaken in brilliant shades of crimson, amber and gold. Quiet lakes become mirrors of extraordinary colour, while familiar pathways and distant shorelines take on a new sense of wonder. The landscape, once dressed in the lush greens of summer, begins its magnificent farewell.

For Canadian landscape artist Gordon Harrison, autumn is more than a season. It is an emotion, a memory, a celebration of nature's ever-changing beauty. It is a time for families to unite again.

Through expressive brushstrokes, vibrant colours and an intuitive understanding of light, Harrison captures not simply the appearance of autumn, but the feeling of its arrival. His paintings invite us to experience the quiet poetry of the Canadian wilderness, where every reflection, every movement of colour and every fleeting moment tells a story.

There is something profoundly moving about autumn. Perhaps it is the knowledge that its beauty is temporary, that its most brilliant colours will eventually surrender to the stillness of winter. Yet it is this very impermanence that makes the season so extraordinary.

The Moment Autumn Arrives is a celebration of those precious transitions – of beauty found in change, of memories awakened by familiar landscapes, and of the remarkable connection between nature and the human spirit.

It is an invitation to pause, to remember, and to rediscover the extraordinary beauty that surrounds us.

For although seasons come and go, the emotions they awaken remain with us forever.

Every life is a landscape. Every brushstroke, a memory.

piedmont. laurentians. québéc. canada.

There is something magical about summer in the Laurentians.

Perhaps it is the endless expanse of sky, where billowing clouds drift effortlessly above the rolling hills. Perhaps it is the warmth of the sunlight dancing across the landscape, illuminating the forests and meadows in a thousand shades of green. Or perhaps it is simply the feeling of being somewhere familiar, somewhere peaceful, somewhere that feels like home.

Nestled in the heart of Quebec's Laurentian Mountains, the picturesque village of Piedmont offers a landscape of quiet beauty and timeless charm. Here, the horizon stretches beyond the treetops, the gentle contours of the hills embrace the countryside, and the magnificent summer sky becomes a work of art in itself.

For Canadian landscape artist Gordon Harrison, the Laurentians hold a particularly meaningful place in his life. It was among these very hills and forests that his childhood fascination with nature first began, inspiring a lifelong passion for the Canadian landscape.

In this new collection, Harrison returns to the beauty and spirit of the Laurentians, capturing the extraordinary relationship between earth and sky.

Through his expressive brushstrokes, luminous colours and remarkable sensitivity to light, he celebrates the openness of the summer landscape. Expansive skies filled with movement and atmosphere rise above the rich greens of the countryside, creating compositions that are at once vibrant, peaceful and deeply evocative.

Yet these paintings are about more than a particular place. They speak to the memories we carry of summer – long, unhurried afternoons, warm breezes drifting through the trees, clouds floating across endless blue skies, and those precious moments when time seems to stand still.

There is a certain freedom beneath a summer sky. A sense of possibility, of renewal, of simply being present in the beauty of the moment.

Beneath the Laurentian Sky is a celebration of that feeling.

Beneath the Laurentians sky is a tribute to the landscapes that shape us, the places that remain in our hearts, and the quiet wonder of a Canadian summer.

For sometimes, the most beautiful journeys are not about discovering somewhere new, but about returning to a place that has always been part of us.

Every life is a landscape. Every brushstroke, a memory.

where the wilderness meets the sky collection algonquin park. ontario. canada.

Where the Wilderness Meets the Sky. A Collection Inspired by Algonquin Park.

Cache Lake. Ragged Falls. Oxtongue River. Opeongo River. Smoke Lake. Ugh Creek.

Each name evokes a memory, a feeling, a moment in time. Together, they tell the story of a landscape that has captured my heart and continues to inspire my work.

Algonquin Provincial Park is one of Canada's most treasured wilderness areas—a vast and timeless landscape spanning more than 7,600 square kilometres of ancient forests, rugged shorelines, winding rivers, and more than 2,000 lakes. Established in 1893 as Ontario's first provincial park, Algonquin is also one of the oldest protected natural areas in North America. It is a place where nature remains wonderfully untamed, where the rhythms of the seasons shape the land, and where the meeting of water, forest, and sky creates an ever-changing canvas.

For generations, this extraordinary landscape has stirred the imagination of Canadian artists. Tom Thomson found endless inspiration among Algonquin's lakes, forests, changing skies, and rugged shorelines, as did the members of the Group of Seven who followed. Through their paintings, they captured more than the physical beauty of the Canadian wilderness. They expressed its spirit—its solitude and strength, its fleeting moments of light, its shifting seasons, and its unmistakable sense of place. Their work continues to remind us of the profound connection between art, nature, and the Canadian landscape.

For me, Algonquin is more than a place of inspiration. It is a place that feels like home. Each time I return, I am welcomed by a familiar sense of belonging. The towering pines, quiet waters, expansive skies, and ever-changing colours of the landscape speak to something deep within me. There is a peacefulness here that invites you to slow down, breathe deeply, and truly observe—to notice the subtle shifts in light, the reflections on the water, the movement of clouds, and the beautiful interplay of colour and atmosphere. It is these moments that continually draw me back to my easel.

In the spring of 2026, Phil and I returned to Algonquin Park with our dear friends Deb and Steve. Together, we wandered familiar paths, explored new places, and immersed ourselves in the beauty of this remarkable landscape. It was a journey filled with discovery, reflection, and renewed inspiration. Being surrounded once again by the sights, sounds, and colours of Algonquin awakened a desire to interpret this special place through my own artistic lens—to capture not simply what I saw, but what I felt. The light, the colour, the movement, the stillness, and the ever-changing atmosphere became the starting point for this new collection of paintings.

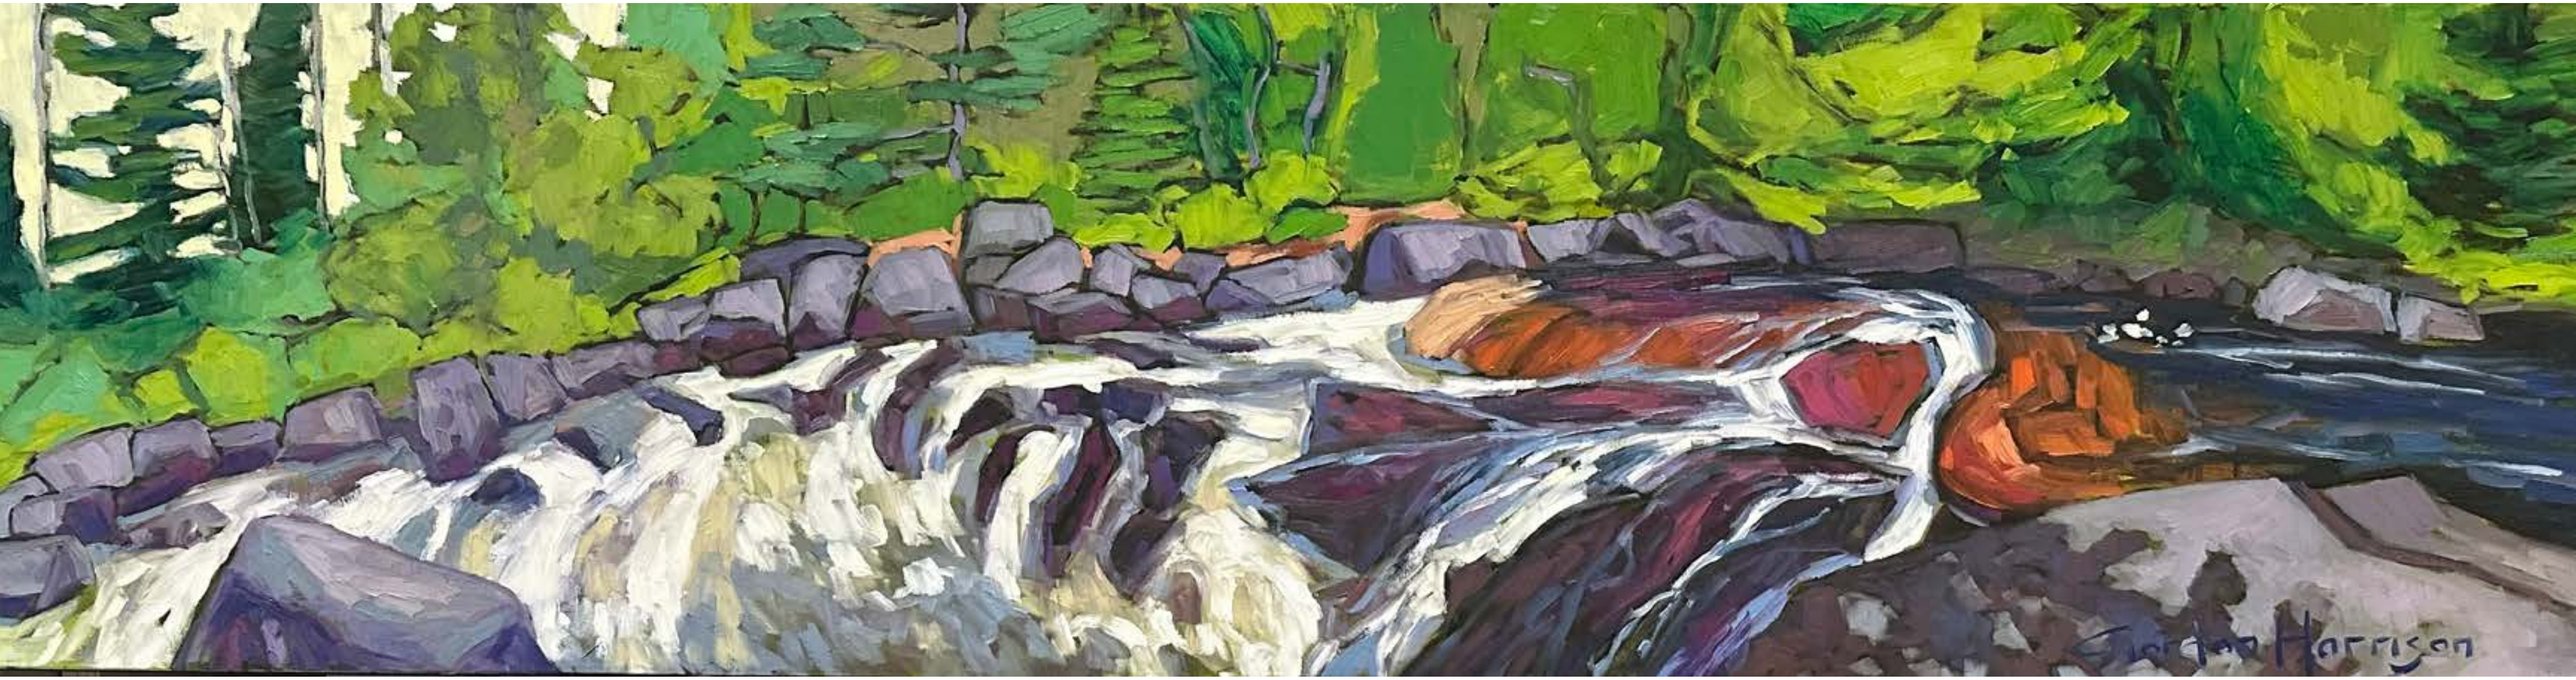

Where the Wilderness Meets the Sky is a celebration of this enduring connection to Algonquin Park. In September 2028, I invite you to experience this extraordinary landscape with me during a five-day plein-air art retreat in Algonquin Park. Together, we will explore, observe, and paint in the very places that have inspired generations of artists.

my memories of the island collection

What an amazing place is Prince Edward Island. The landscape on the Island reminds me how beautiful that part of Canada is, every time I return from it or close my eyes.

Prince Edward Island is a jewel in my painter's toolbox – a place of quiet brilliance and enduring clarity. With each visit, the island reveals itself anew, offering fresh vistas and unexpected pathways that invite exploration and, inevitably, translation onto canvas. What feels familiar is never static; it shifts gently with the light, the seasons, and my own way of seeing.

My most recent journey in September, brought me back to beloved locations I have painted before, yet it also opened my eyes to the understated elegance of the island's simpler forms. There is a deepening in my vision each time I return – a growing ability to notice, to pause, and to appreciate what might once have gone unseen. I remain drawn to the charm of fishing huts and weathered boats, the striking contrast of red clay cliffs against soft white beaches. But this year, it was the vast, expressive skies that held me. I found myself taking liberties there–infusing them with the island's vibrant hues – while the gently rolling landscapes, often punctuated by humble farm structures, grounded the work in a quiet, enduring rhythm.

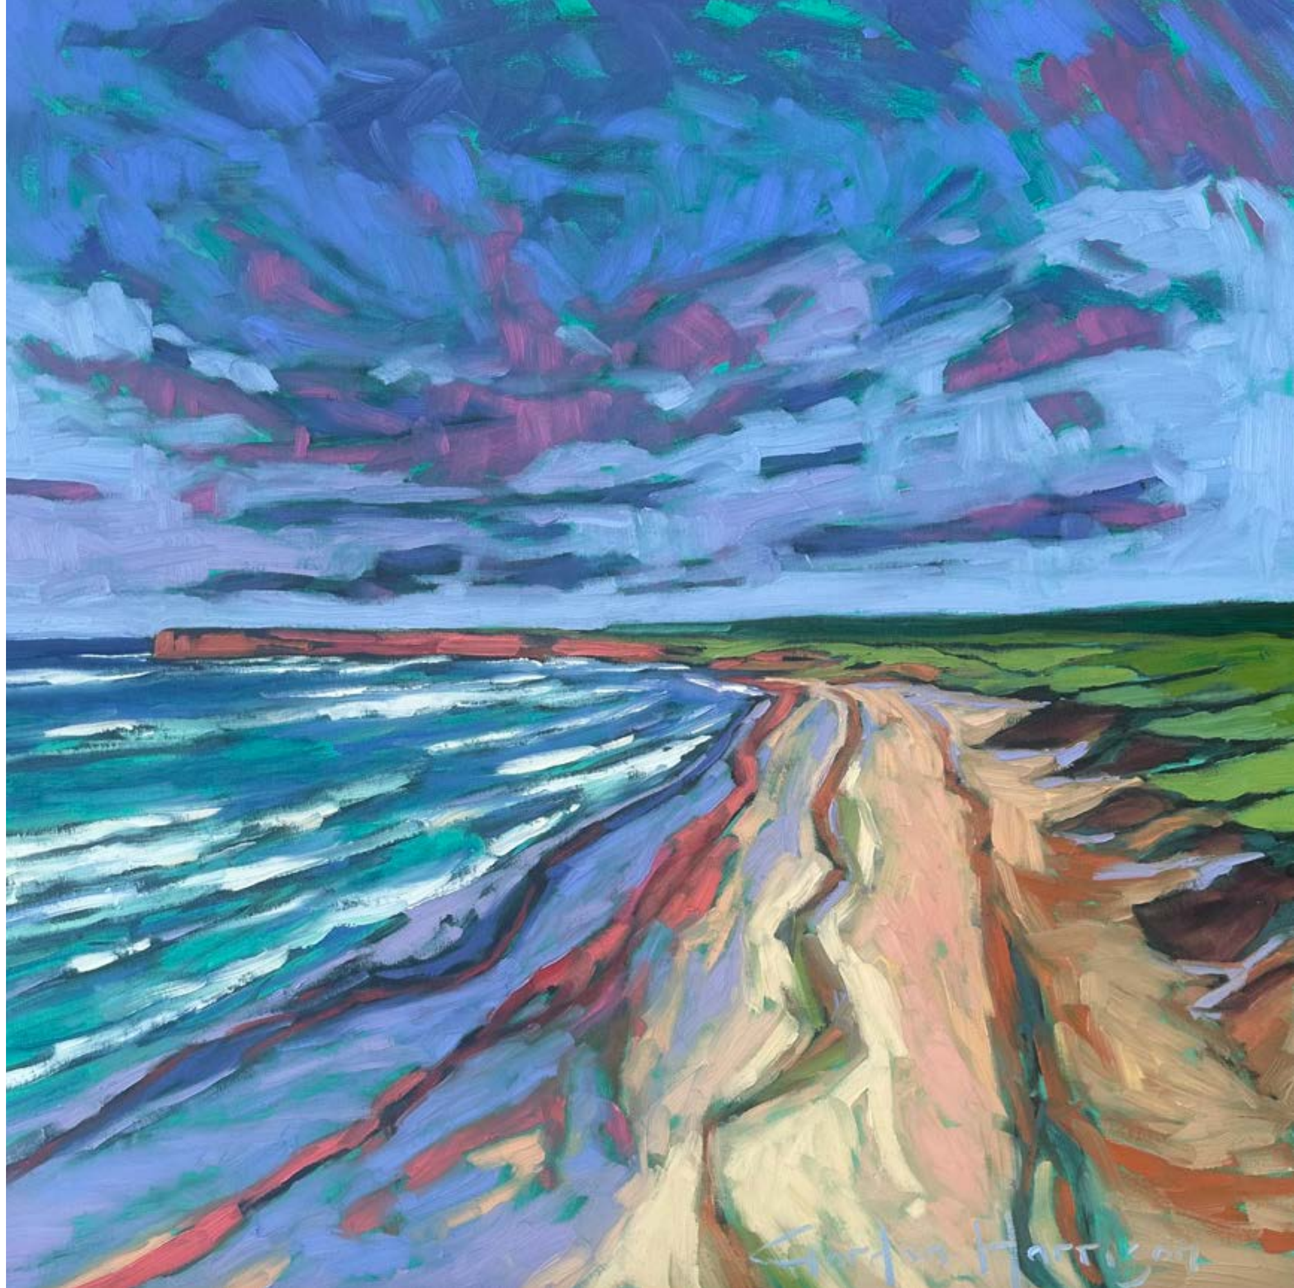

On the very last day of my visit, in the very last few hours, something magical happened – I found the exact beautiful poplar trees I had painted years ago thanks to Dave Stewart. I knew I had to paint them again. And the grandchild of the man who planted these years ago came out to talk to me and give me their history. That is PEI. It is about the people and the scenery.

This new collection is both a rediscovery and a revelation: a revisiting of cherished memories and a renewed celebration of the island's natural beauty.

tulips rêverie collection

national capital. ontario. canada.

Each spring, Gordon Harrison offers a new collection of tulips. The 2026 Tulips Rêverie collection is about a quiet dream that invites you to dream and plan a vessel of memories, emotions and fleeting beauty for the beautiful energy spring brings us. It is about the different parts of our day and state of being: the gentle unfurling of petals at dawn, the saturated hush of midday bloom, the tender collapse into the evening's shadow. In tulips rêverie, colour drifts and blooms beyond realism into sensation.

Whispers of serenity tells the story of a calm, peaceful visit to martina and jim's oasis and the forest near brennan's hill in the Gatineau valley. From the very moment of arrival, we were invited to feed the birds, whose songs blend with the soft rustling of wind through the trees. Gordon knew that he had to capture this moment of calm and peacefulness of stepping away from city life and reconnecting once again with the peaceful rhythms of our Canadian landscape.

Prince Edward Island is renowned for its wild blueberry fields because of its level fields and minimal rocks. In September right after the first cold, the fields take on a gorgeous pink reddish colour. Isn't it simply breathtaking? Gordon and I had to go back and drive through a narrow country road for kilometers to rediscover these fields – worth the drive as it takes your breath away.

Prince Edward Island's architectural landscape reflects a mix of historical styles, with Georgian and Colonial homes being particularly prevalent. These styles feature gabled roofs, symmetrical designs, and simple moldings, often adorned with decorative bargeboard or "gingerbread". Island homes often incorporate unique features like central dormers, snub gables, and creative shingle patterns. I love to drive through PEI and discover these beautiful colourful homes.

New Orleans was on the bucket list. Phil and I spent five days there with high school friends. New Orleans is well known for its jazz music, but it is also known for its architectural colourful homes. You will find some stating back to the 1700s. Homes are often attached to each other to provide stability as New Orleans is built on top of water. You will find different styles of homes – Creole cottages 1790-1850 – American townhouses 1820-50 – Creole townhouses 1788-mid 1800s – raised centre-hall cottages 1803-1870 – double-gallery houses 1820-50 – and the shotgun houses 1850-1910. And of course there are the Queen Anne style mansions along Saint Charles Avenue that go back to the 1830s.

Charlevoix You Never Disappoint!

So beautiful with the St. Lawrence River and dramatic mountain views that seem to drop into the St. Lawrence captured in paintings from so many gifted artists. So artistic. so Charlevoisin!

For gordon and I, it is the capital of Canadian art. René Richard, Marc-Aurèle Fortin, Clarence Gagnon, Bruno Coté, Arthur Lismer, A.Y. Jackson, Edwin Holgate. These gifted artists painted here and created history, and so did Françoise Labbé whose museum is named after her. So much history.

And Gordon Harrison who won first prize in 2014 at Rêves d'automne in Charlevoix, is part of that history.

In June 2022, I was privileged to coach 20 artists from the Blue Mountain School of Landscape Painting. It was a thrilling experience for me, and I understand that the five days were a memorable journey for everyone. The five demo paintings that I completed during the week were happily purchased by the participants. I chose to do a collection of the magnificent landscapes of Thornbury-Clarksburg which is part of the Blue Mountains region. A new day has come collection is dedicated to friends of ours who have been waiting for that special day to come for a long time and this year, it came.

Lake of the Woods is a lake occupying parts of the Canadian provinces of Ontario and Manitoba; the surrounding area is one of the natural wonders of North America. It comprises over 14 000 islands and more than 105 000 kilometers of shoreline. This beautiful lake is an unspoiled destination in Canada's wilderness and is one of the top fishing lakes in North America.

"We commissioned Gordon Harrison to do a diptych of Lake of the Woods. a summer cottage destination where as a family, we shared many happy memories. The painting reminds us of the times we spent endless hours in the lake; fishing, swimming and boating. My wife's grandparents are no longer with us but the painting reminds us of the times we shared with them. It is a tribute to her family and the great memories that the Lake of the Woods gave us. The painting will be a legacy for us as we will pass on the painting to our two daughters who will carry on the memories."

Lake Superior owns its name because of its size and being the largest of the Great Lakes extending from Minesota to Wisconsin to Michigan to Ontario. It is more like a sea rather than a lake. For me, it is a place where the untouched landscape was so well captured by the Canadian Group of Seven in its rugged unspoiled beauty. Years later its beauty continues to inspire those who take a moment in their busy lives to appreciate nature.

Katherine Cove, with its sparkling clear turquoise water, is a place I keep re-visiting as it is so beautiful. I enjoy climbing the steep rocks enclosing the cove seeking views across the water to capture on canvas. Several times I considered taking a small dip in the tempting water to cool off but hesitated as I was alone and unsure of the water conditions and temperature. I was recently telling this story to someone from Sault Ste. Marie who shared with me that the water in Katherine Cove is very swimmable and is in fact some of the warmest water in an otherwise very cold Lake Superior. I can hardly wait until my next trip to Lake Superior.

Blue Rocks is a community in the Canadian province of Nova Scotia, located in the Lunenburg Municipal District in Lunenburg County. It stands to seaward of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, somewhat to the east. For many years a fishing village, it was discovered by many artists and photographers (including Joseph Purcell, William E. deGarthe, Jack L. Gray, Wallace R. MacAskill, E. Earle Bailly and others) beginning in the 1940s. Today the village boasts many artists, and there are also numerous guest houses to be found among the fishermen's dwellings.

Inspired by a 1923 photograph of the town of Entrelacs known as St-Émile at the time. Entrelacs is where my family ancestries chose to have a three season property in 1905. I am third generation on the lake. The lake and the Laurentians landscape is where I found my inspiration to paint. In this paitning, many of the buildings are gone or have been repalced. The church and presbytery remain. Gone is Jules Provost sawmill, Raymond Dupuis pharmacy, Jean Proudrier Hotel, the farm of the Pagé family in the foreground and others. The whole school house has been replaced. Yet today, Entrelacs remains a place like no other place. It is family for me.

le printemps collection 2023

laurentians. québec. canada.

Le printemps collection represents a fresh start, a new beginning, a time to reconnect after a long winter. The snow gone, the fresh air, the trees budding again - the sun returning and the days getting longer - yes it's a new beginning and for many of us especially after the covid journey - it is a time to reconnect with people in person and to celebrate life. There is nothing like a walk through the Gatineau Park to reconnect with nature, friends and family.

I spent all my summers at our lake. My siblings and I are third generation on the lake. It is a place where I grew up getting to know generations of families. Victoria Day came and we went up to plant our flowers for the summer and get the cottage ready. By June the population of the little town of Entrelacs would triple as cottgaers arrived for the summer from all over. It was a time of celebration. Today the tradition continues with five generations of families. Hard to believe that all this happened because one man purchased most of the property around the lake and subdivided them to his friends whose families are still on the lake. My grandfather acquired our land and traded the land with a farmer for a Leech Piano. That piano today tells the story of five generations in our family. I love my summer gatherings at the lake.

première neige collection 2023

laurentians. québec. canada.

Although Première Neige collection, which means first snow, is a scene from the Laurentians, Québec - the collection title comes from a visit to Sudbury, Ontario. When Phil visited his very first boss in human resources, Sheila, for whom he had the greatest respect, and his good human resources buddy Nicole, the first snow appeared on the ground. It is a reminder that there are people we meet in our lives who stay in our lives forever although we may not see them as often as we'd like and we are thankful that they are still there and we feel as excited to see them as the very first time we see our first snow.

entrelacs. laurentians. québec. canada.

La Rivière-du-Nord is a place I love to visit and experience all four Canadian seasons. It is over 130 kms long and starts from Sainte-Agathe-des-Monts in the Laurentians all the way to the Ottawa River. Along the river, cottagers and visitors discover quaint little towns – Val-David, Sainte-Adèle and Prévost.

I have always marvelled at the scenery around Lake Tremblant and the Mont-Tremlant National Park. What is truly unbelievable is to kayak or canoe the waterways in this region. This collection is deeply rooted in this area. It showcases the shallow, sandy rivers, in particular la Rivière-du-Nord, and the always present hardy, black spruces (that I captured in reds) stacked along its shores. The skyline portrays the Precambrian rock mountains of the Laurentian Shield with their soft, rolling, distinguishable peaks. I wanted the viewer to imagine themselves on the river, travelling its course - on an unforgettable autumn day.

Entrelacs. The Entrelacs collection is about a well-kept secret of an unexpected pine forest hidden behind the small village of Entrelacs where my studio is located in the Laurentians, Québec. I came across this hidden secret last winter while Phil and I were snowmobiling with friends along the many trails in the Laurentian Hills. I marveled at the size of the forest and the number of tall stately pine trees. I knew then that I needed to revisit the forest in the fall as I could not get it out of my mind.

"What good is the warmth of summer, without the cold of winter to give it sweetness" once wrote John Steinbeck (1902-1968), author and winner of the Nobel Prize in Literature.

It was mid-january and I was away for the weekend to capture the majestic landscape along the Madawaska River in the Ottawa Valley just south of Algonquin Park. On a late afternoon as the sun was setting, the trees took on a pinky glow. I knew then that it was time to get on my snowshoes and capture the warmth and colours before the day was over.

John Steinbeck was right - we need winter to appreciate how great is summer.

Can you hear the song of the wind through the leaves? Sit back and listen. Fall tells a song - a song about life - it is about the need to transition, reflect, sit back and get ready for our next adventure.

Beautiful Gatineau Park! The many paths of this magnificent conservation park continue to attract people who love nature and need a balance in their lives. It is a place that we can count on, where we feel free to leave behind our day-to-day responsibilities and worries and enter a world full of magnificent colours. A real treasure.

This painting was painted by award winning Canadian landscape artist Gordon Harrison and residents, staff and friends of the Chartwell New Edinburgh Square Retirement Residence. Ottawa. January 23, 2020.

Residents, families and friends were invited to a wine and cheese for the unveiling of the painting Neiges with a slide show of photographs featuring those who contributed.

The painting will be displayed permanently in the lobby of the New Edinburgh Square Residence as a moment to remember all of those who participated in this wonderful journey.

Special thanks to the residents, staff and friends of the residence who participated and made this experience possible. Special thanks to award winning Canadian landscape artist Gordon Harrison. Mrs Robert's son-in-law and partner of Phil.

Residents who participated in the journey including Phil's mom who is wearing the sweatshirt with large leopard print heart on the right.

Through my art journey I have the pleasure of meeting wonderful people who appreciate and collect my art. Danielle and Yves are a wonderful couple whom Phil and I got to know. As they were planning to move into a new condo in Montréal, they commissioned me to do a large painting of the view from their Laurentian property. They wanted this painting to have a special significance to remember their dog who had passed away. So in the painting somewhere, is a little reference to the dog that only they know, which makes this painting even more special.

la rivière-du-nord. laurentians. québec. canada.

La Rivière-du-Nord is one of the prettiest in the Laurentians which meanders through the Southern Laurentian mountains. The river passes through many Laurentian towns including Val-David, Ste-Adèle and Piedmont. As one enjoys a walk, bicycle, or hiking excursion in the summer or fall, or a ski or snow shoe venture, one discovers rushing water with white waterfalls and rocky shorelines inside its beautiful landscapes. I enjoy cycling from my studio in Entrelacs along the river on a nice sunny day where, in the company of friends, I relax to the sound of the birds and find inspiration for my next painting.

In 2019, Phil and I travelled to Newfoundland to plan our next art retreat. We decided that our home base was going to be Bonavista and we had the pleasure of meeting the mayor. Here's a message from mayor John Norman:

"On behalf of both the town of Bonavista and Russell Town Inn, I look forward to welcoming you all on this inspirational art retreat with Gordon Harrison and Phil Émond in eastern Newfoundland. With a rich cultural and arts scene, the town of Bonavista is celebrated at national and international levels for its economic success, culinary experiences and historic preservation of built landscapes. I look forward to hosting you all and sharing more about our community."

Gordon and I first got to know Ted years ago at the Toronto Art Show. Ted worked at General Motors all his life and saved his money so that one day he would fulfil a life long dream – to have a collection of original art. Over the years, Ted was able to fulfill that dream. He followed our journey and brought along his nieces. He loves to sit and admire his beautiful Harrison collection. I learned a valuable tip from Ted – to hang your art low so that when you sit, you enjoy it.

The beautiful Madawaska River flows out of Algonquin Park through to the Ottawa Valley. The large stand of birch trees that are united side by side along the river and up the mountainside remind me of how important it is in life to be surrounded by people we love. This is a signature spring collection at a very particular time in my journey. As Sue and Steve, who own two pieces in this collection would tell you, you will note a distinctive pink ribbon swirl in each painting in support of breast cancer research.

"A colourful and happy delight that is an entry into the world as seen through the senses of Gordon Harrison. The exuberantly coloured trees swaying in the breeze, challenge not only your eyes but make you practically smell the forest erupting into spring and the promise of summer thus giving life to the room. Ottawa is the Nation's Capital – it is where one will find the National Gallery of Canada on Sussex Drive. It is also where one will find the Gordon Harrison Canadian Landscape Gallery, two blocks away.

I was invited by Friends of the National Gallery of Canada to share my journey as a Canadian landscape artist. I was to be one of the first working artists to speak to the members of the gallery. This was a wonderful experience I will always remember. I wish to thank Sydney Hicks for inviting me.

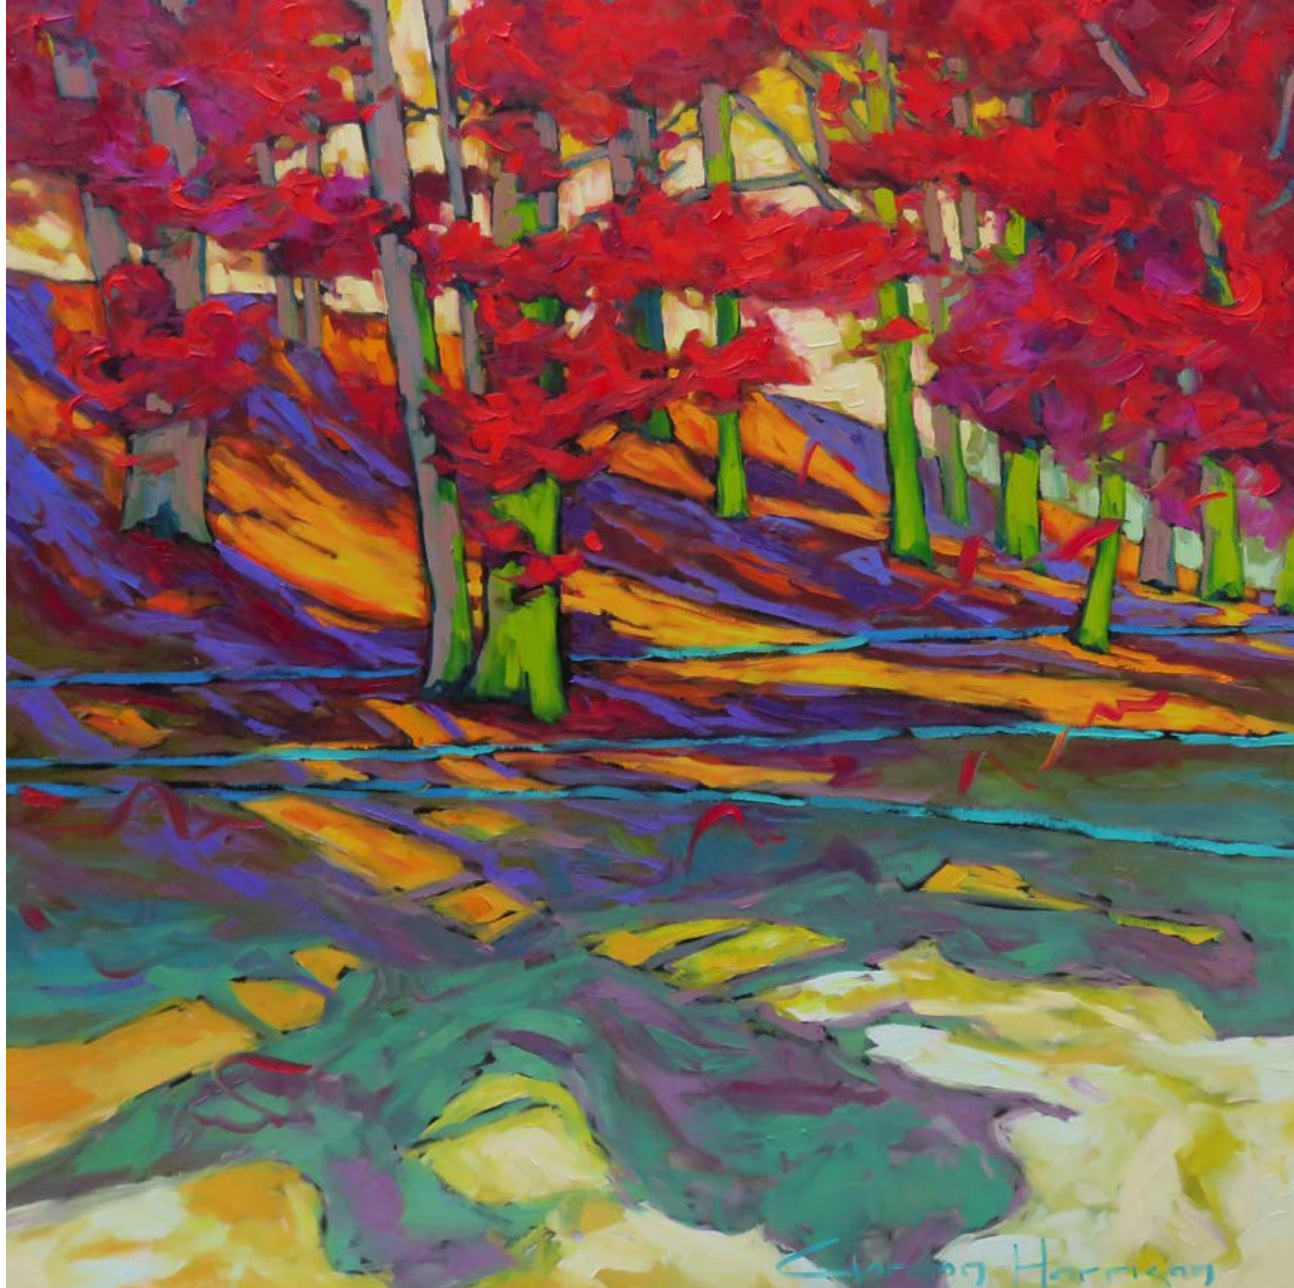

I have a studio in New Edinburgh in Ottawa where I paint and also coach people. The City of Ottawa invited me to participate in Doors Open Ottawa to showcase my heritage studio and my work to the public. I take great pride in a city where I spent 30 years working as an urban planner. Marcelle Kimberley and the Doors Open Ottawa volunteers, thank you for the great work you do so well each year, showcasing the heritage and colours of our Nation's Capital.

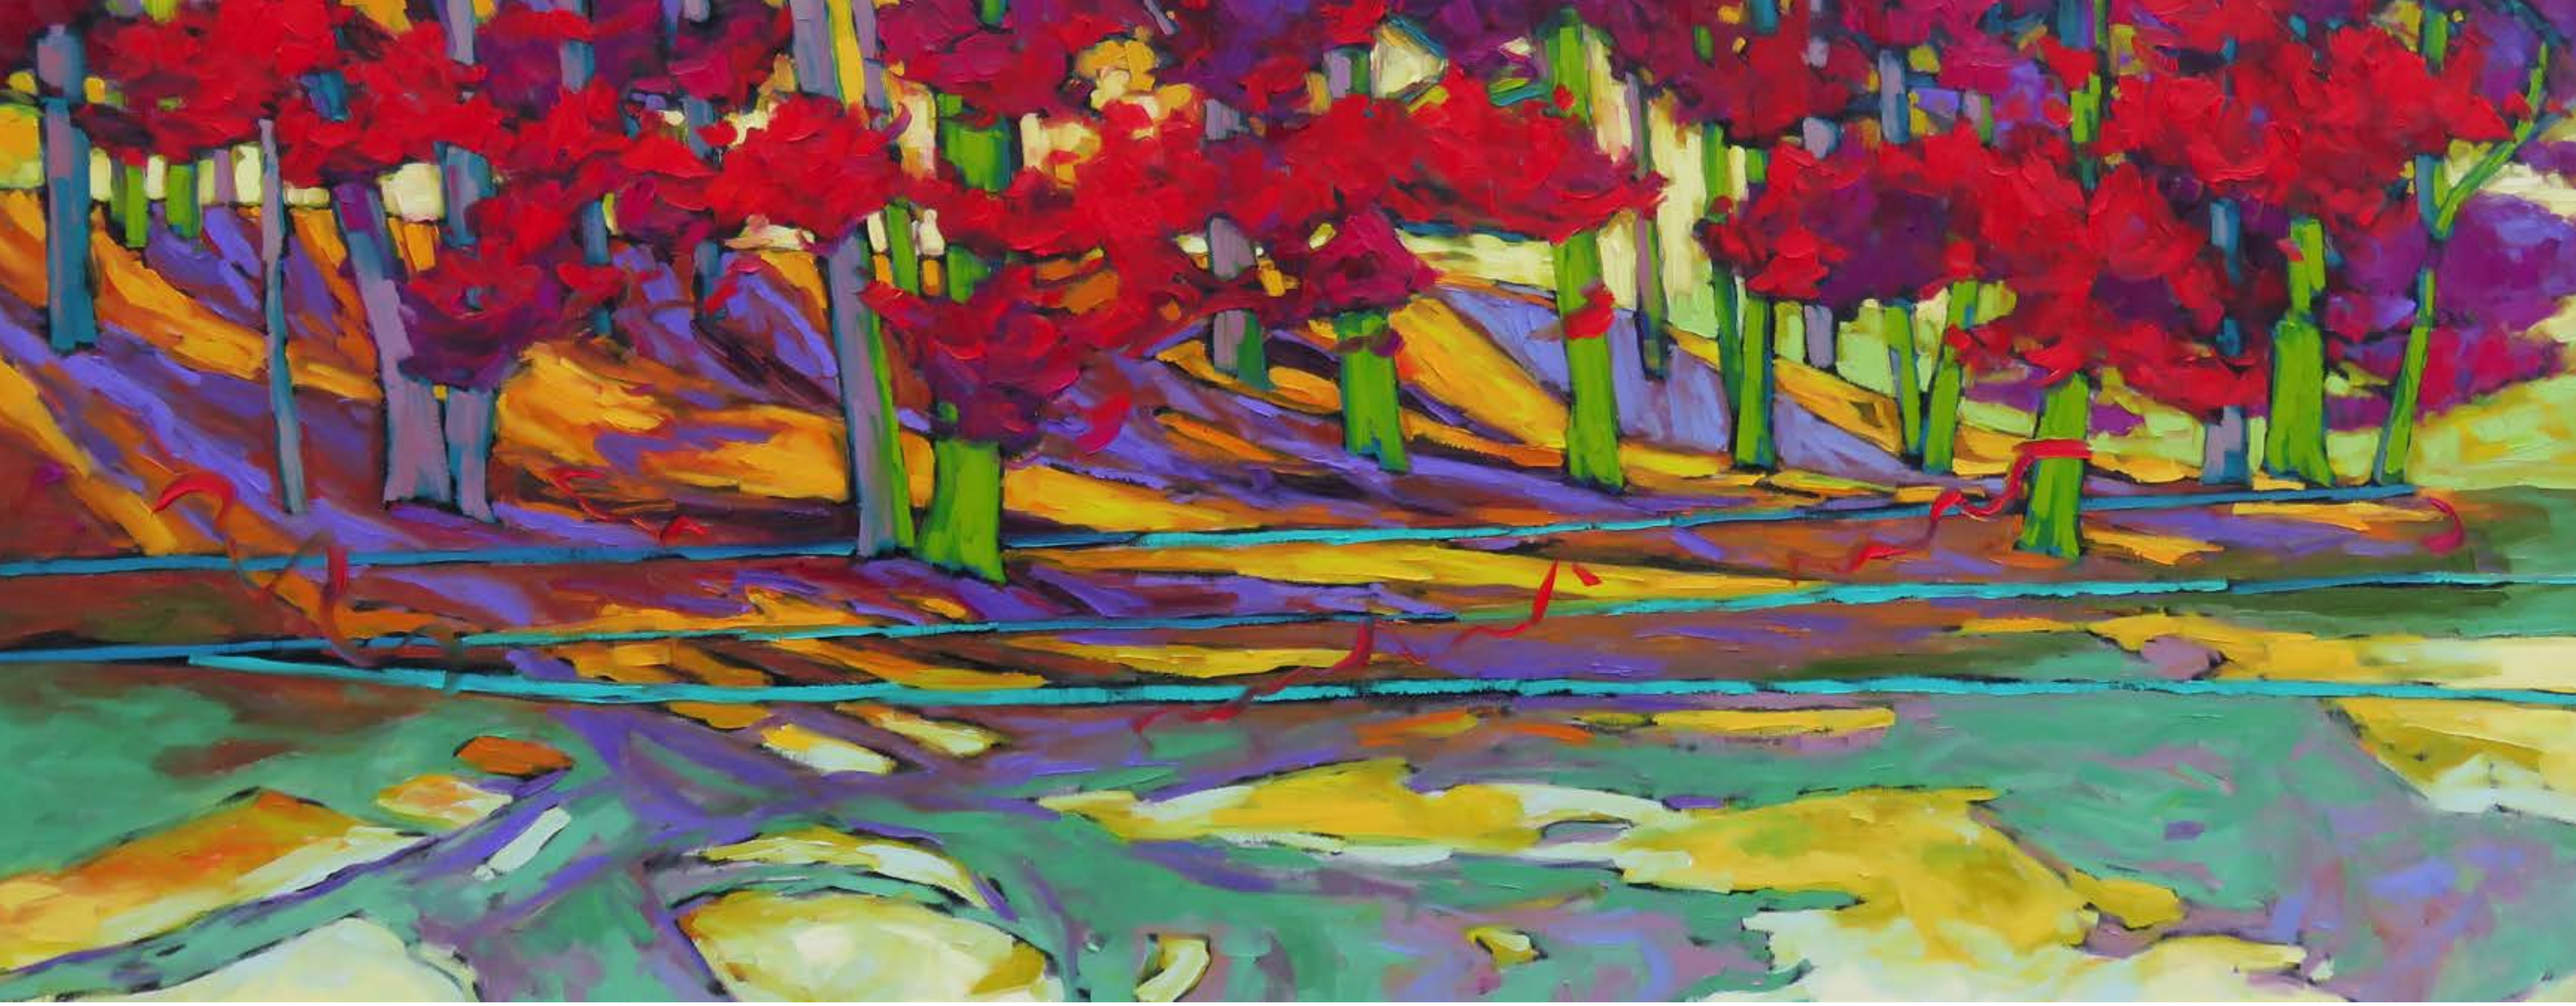

To commemorate Canada's 150th anniversary, I selected a fall scene in Rockcliffe Park. Right behind me is a pavilion that was built specifically for Queen Elizabeth for her visit to Canada before her coronation. The little pavilion was built in the event that the Queen had to go to the rest room.

lac croche. mont-tremblant. laurentians and charlevoix. québec. canada.

Each year we host a VIP cocktail and dinner in our gallery and invite our clients to join us. The very first painting in this collection was purchased by a couple who joined us at our first VIP fall dinner at our new gallery location on Sussex Drive. The painting is one of four paintings that make up their collection.

premier sourire du printemps collection

parc de la gatineau. québec. canada.

This collection was a big hit. It also represents the scene that I painted with audience participation at the Ashbury College Ball fundraiser. I sketched my canvas and invited the audience to come up and put a few brushstrokes on the painting and sign the back of the canvas. The painting sold for twice its value and the money went to the school.

This was Gordon's spring collection for 2016. Feel the energy of the new landscape emerging after our cold winter. Our Canadian landscape takes on a new fragrance as we all embrace and smile at the arrival of spring. a season that transforms our landscapes into a mystery.

When I look at this particular collection I sit back and smile. I reflect back when I first started to paint and how I painted tulips in a very traditional way only to paint them years later in a very stylized manner. How I have evolved as an artist.

I feel so fortunate that my studio is in close proximity to Gatineau Park. The park is beautiful year-round and one can capture all four seasons so well either on foot, on bicycle, snowshoes, or cross country skis. These white birches caught my attention as they look happy dancing away together as one happy family.

shimmering lakes of muskoka collection

Muskoka has so much history. Muskoka. the capital of shimmering lakes, boathouses, hand-crafted mahogany antique boats, and sunsets.

When the media wrote about the success of the first Gordon Harrison Canadian Landscape Gallery on Murray Street in Ottawa, they included a reference to my next journey. Muskoka. I received a call from the very talented photographer John McQuarrie who was about to work on a new book on this region. John's book, A Spirit of Place. Muskoka Then and Now, includes some of my paintings of Muskoka. Thank you John for a great project.

I must share with you an anecdote about Salmon Point, a boathouse painting on Lake Rosseau. I remember two people who collect my work who both left their places to purchase the very same painting on the opening day of my show at the Toronto Art Expo. Ted left from Oshawa by train and Glen left Markham by car. Ted made it to the booth 15 minutes before Glen and immediately purchased the invitation piece from Muskoka. Glen arrived and said he would purchase the painting. Ted smiled proudly.

The artist's story behind a painting is rarely the same story for the one who acquires the painting. For Ted, the painting represents the time spent as a young man in Muskoka when he would spend one month each year in a boathouse along the lake, tanned all day and only got dressed for dinner at the Clevelands House. For him it captures those beautiful memories. I received a handwritten letter from Ted, which I still have and treasure, to let me know how much the painting meant to him. Knowing how my art makes people feel inspires me to paint even more.

The painting on the right of Lake Muskoka had been in the window at the gallery for only a few hours when it was purchased on the spot. The painting is now hanging at the client's cottage. It's always a good feeling for an artist to know when you bring in a new piece that somebody has snapped it up right away.

twisted rock pine collection

georgian bay. ontario. canada.

I remember the day I stayed in the town of Killarney and decided to rent a boat and hire a guide for the day. My plan was to get out onto Georgian Bay to see the crystal clear blue waters that I remembered from earlier visits. Our trip took us to the Fox Islands. We motored around Philip Edward Island visiting all the inlets and bays making up this large island. We saw kayakers passing through the waters on their way to other islands seeking seclusion and peace for a few days. The guide knew the water like the back of his hand. He had brought me a lunch so we moored in a small bay and watched the other boaters pass by. What struck me about this area were the many rocky islands with little or no trees and the magnificent blue waters... almost Caribbean in colour. I long to visit this area again.

I hope that the guide who took me around Georgian Bay discovers my book and knows how much he made me feel welcomed.

This series of paintings capture my Georgian Bay experience. The Georgian pine is the common element in each painting. Many are standing weathered. Their 'lean or slant' is a testament to the years of exposure to the westerly Bay winds. Each painting in this series has a mood that is individually created by its unique colour palette and the ever-changing play of light. I am pleased with the results.

In June 2015, I went back to Atlantic Canada to hear and feel the poetry offered by its sea, fishing dories, harbours and unique landscapes. I was revisiting this beautiful region of Canada years after my last visit. The towns may have changed a bit but the sea still told the same story. that of tranquility, beauty and endless horizon. How I missed it.

The town of Lac-Tremblant-Nord in the Laurentians invited Gordon Harrison to paint plein air La Rivière Cachée to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the town where Maurice Cullen, mentor to the Group of Seven, and Edwin Holgate, who joined the Group of Seven, held residences in the early 1900's and painted Tremblant-Nord. In March 2015, Gordon's paintings hung proudly at City Hall with works by Maurice Cullen.

My friends and family always get nervous when I leave to discover a new region of Canada as I tend to venture into the wilderness, sometimes alone.

My friend Rose Kung gave me bells and other devices to ward off the black bears. One day while hiking in Killarney Provincial Park, and lost (I actually titled a painting Lost in Killarney Park), I heard a large animal approaching me. I could not see the animal as I was in a marshland and enclosed by a thicket of dense shrubs. I knew the animal was close as its movements became louder and I could hear it snorting. I felt as if it was passing within touching distance of me and then the animal stopped. I held my breath for the minute or two it stood beside me. It drank from the open waters in the marsh and then continued on its journey. On this occasion, I dared not ring my bell. That evening I recounted my story to the inn keeper who advised me that moose frequently travel through this marsh.

Most families on our lake in the Laurentians. like my family. have been there for many generations and some since the 1880s. Over the years, families have gotten to know each other generation after generation. Although the Johnson-Smith family have since left the lake, to this day, they continue to enjoy the view from their cottage as they commissioned me to paint it. Meim and David shared with me that it was easier to part with the cottage now that they have a memory of it.

sand dune willows collection

prince edward county. ontario. canada.

As a university student, I would escape Toronto and head to the Sandbanks Provincial Park for a weekend of climbing the sand dunes.

The sand dunes seemed endless and tall and contained no vegetation. I reconnected with the Park, looking for the same white dunes I had climbed over 35 years ago. I discovered that the shape of the dunes had changed; they were no longer as high and were now covered with shrub-like material.

One of the paintings in this collection is in the home of a lovely couple who got married at the Gordon Harrison Canadian Landscape Gallery. This couple had vacationed there and this painting keeps reminding them of their love for each other.

The dunes, just like life, changed over time but regardless, continue to attract people.

"One of the great things about Gordon's artistry is that his interpretation of Canadian landscapes is something my husband and I can agree on... which is not the case with most other artists! In particular we enjoy being drawn into his paintings – how alive they become through the creative use of colour palettes; as well as capturing the essence of a scene, be it reflected in motion or stillness. We treasure the works of Gordon Harrison that grace our house."

To this day, I consider Baie-Saint-Paul the capital of Canada's art scene. Some of the greatest painters including the Group of Seven painted there and most importantly to me, the artist who would inspire me for the rest of my life. René Richard. It was there that I received national recognition in 2014 with first prize at the national competition Rêves d'automne for my Charlebois en blanc collection – competing among 140 Canadian artists and 251 paintings from Canada and Europe. "The allure of Gordon Harrison's work is an indescribable combination of charm, boldness, vivid color, confident brush strokes and exquisite light play. all wrapped up in a unique perspective with passion and heart. One never tires of it.

Gordon is the only artist my husband and I both adore as a person and an artist. We feel blessed to have such an abundance of exquisite beauty in our home that transforms hourly as the light changes. It's truly mesmerizing, timeless and lifts our spirits daily.

Upon seeing this piece, we were smitten and couldn't walk away from it. No one captures the mountain light and vibrancy like Gordon Harrison. This exquisite piece captures both the intricate light play of the snow and its colors and shadows. As the day light changes, so too do the dominant colours, bringing the piece to life."

charlevoix region. québec. canada.

Charlevoix. the capital of fine Québec cheeses, the mighty fleuve Saint-Laurent, the colourful homes with their metal roofs, bed and breakfasts and cafés welcoming visitors from around the world. Charlevoix. the capital of art galleries and studios of well known Québec artists. Charlevoix. home of René Richard, the artist who provided me with my strongest inspiration.

Whether painting plein-air, sipping a glass of wine with local cheeses or skiing Le Massif, Charlevoix is a place I feel is "home". I keep fond memories of the incredible view of Le fleuve Saint-Laurent as Phil and I skied down Le Massif; our dinners with "French Girl" and Jacques, and of my visit to the historical property of René Richard and seeing his incredible work yet again.

Charlevoix is a place that no one should spare when visiting Québec.

Charlevoix takes on a new colourful look as spring arrives and local artists, itchy from a long winter's hibernation, venture outdoors to capture la magie du printemps.

"And … I remember clearly in my mind's eye, the day I looked over and saw this incredible painting, in the garden, on an easel, at Gordon and Phil's charming studio on John Street in New Edinburgh. And … I had to have it. And … it has hung in a place of honour in my living room since. And … it is the first thing one sees when one walks in my front door. And … without exception, everyone comments on its beauty … the calmness it creates in my space … the pallete of taupes and purple trees as only Gordon can create. It was the time, I believe, when Gordon was becoming more contemporary in style. And… it is perfectly, perfect. And … I LOVE it! Xox"

meech lake collection

I frequently visit Meech Lake to discover more of its beauty and serenity. Along the eastern shoreline there are countless trails with open vistas out and across the lake. I selected several of these vistas to paint for my winter 2012 collection. The mood in each painting is enhanced by the varying colour palette. For the early morning light I introduced pastel shades. Deeper shades of gold and red suggest the late afternoon or early evening light. Whatever time of day, winter at Meech Lake is magical.

This is a view from the south end of Meech Lake that I love to paint. I snowshoed my way to the end of the lake to find that special spot of tranquillity looking through the large pine trees. As with all of my winter paintings, I love to give winter magical colourss – a feeling of warmth on a nice sunny day.

The Diable River, the biggest in Tremblant National Park, is a favourite spot for kayakers and canoeists enamoured with its wilderness landscapes. “The Meanders of La Diable” offer a six-kilometre trip along serpentine, tranquil river vistas where one can explore the many bends of the river and glide past its sandy banks. The Diable offers spectacular views of the oldest Laurentian mountains and its wildlife – herons, kingfishers, beavers and white-tailed deer.

A poem inspired by Forest Symphony Collection 2

An orchestra of colours conspire,
Harmonized below an orchid-lit sky
Conducting scarlets and marmalades,
Melodic movements that mystify.

A canvas for the conscious mind,
Leaves blend in passion to one another,
Like lovers lost in silent dialogue,
Expressed through the transference of colour.

A ballad of seasons in discord,
Dispute the progression of time,
Notes of Winter's cool winds– blow in,
And shifts into Autumn's paradigm.

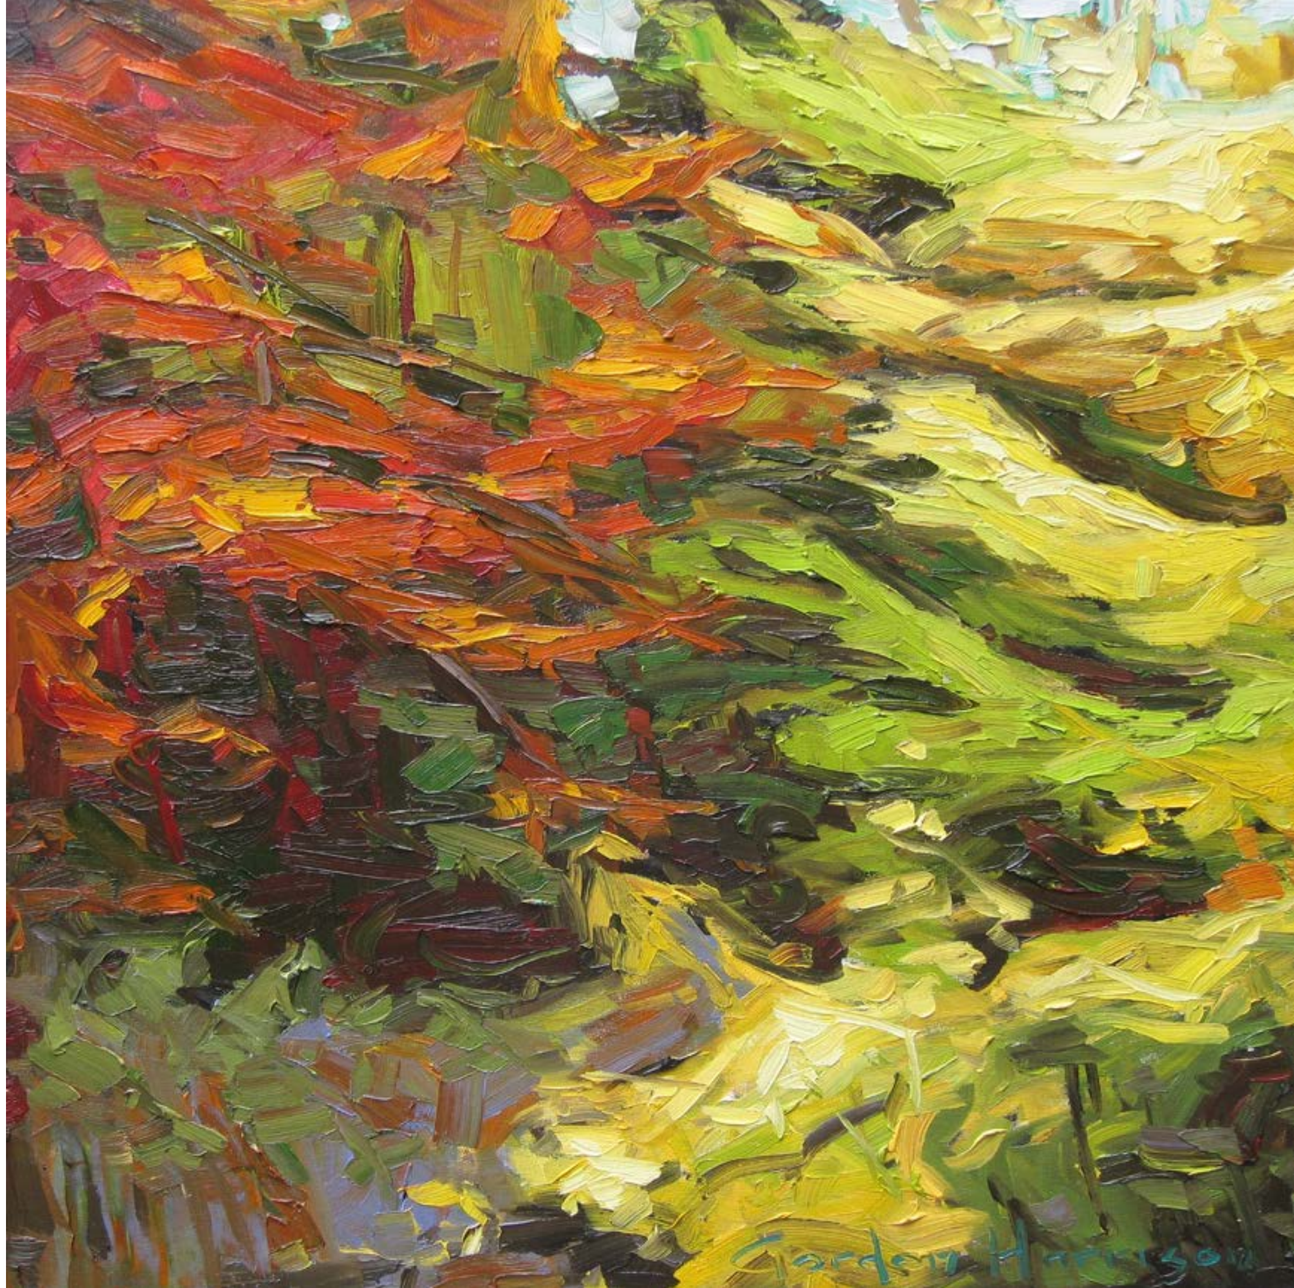

A compilation of tones and hues,
Paint the artist's inspiration,
For him to sit in the symphony of silence,
And expand his imagination.

A gentle breeze was blowing through the forest as I walked along a familiar trail in Gatineau Park. I was alone with my camera seeking photo opportunities as I approached one of the many lookouts. By the time I reached the edge of the escarpment to view the beautiful Ottawa Valley below, the breeze became stronger. A forceful wind began to shake the beech and maple branches extending and moving them back and forth similar to the motions of a conductor of a symphony. And the sound of the blowing wind through the woods resembled the music of that symphony. I spent several minutes at this location listening to the "forest symphony". This painting successfully captures the trees reaching out and touching one another. I used a deep magenta colour to create the rear wall of the forest. This deep shade prevents our eyes from travelling inside the forest but encourages the viewer to observe the foreground where the symphony is occurring. The violet accent in the central portion of the canvas is what makes this painting so appealing.

I was invited by the Rideau Club in Ottawa to speak about my art. The club has purchased one of four Forest Symphony Collection paintings and it hangs proudly at the Rideau Club.

Tom Thomson, one of the greatest Canadian artists who inspired the group of seven, perished in Canoe Lake. No one really knows whether it was an accident or whether it was the revenge of a lover, but what we do know is that some of his best work is from this region.

Many thanks to Bob Lawson who took me on a private expedition on Canoe Lake. I wanted to visit Tom Thomson's Memorial Cairn at Hayhurst Point. By the afternoon, Bob and I saw a storm developing in the distance and the waters becoming choppy. I knew I still had many places left to visit and paint and that it was no time to disappear to the bottom of the lake. at least not yet. While we were boarding the canoe, the rains started and the sky darkened. We considered waiting out the storm but decided, if we stuck close to shore, we would make it back to the docks before the worst of the storm hit the lake. We were both experienced canoeists. Out of nowhere, a row boat approached the Tom Thomson memorial site, containing a family of seven people, including grandparents. We could see they were inexperienced oarsmen. We tried pointing to the sky and told them that a bad storm was approaching and that they should turn around but they spoke no English. We waited at the dock to ensure they returned safely. They did.

The Icicle Land collection captures a frozen marshland in Gatineau Park in winter. Although titled Icicle Land, the golden marshland grasses echo a sense of warmth and the introduction of pastel tones in the sky and evergreens give the painting an entirely new outlook. I refer to this winter scene as a "warm winter painting", as the cooler shades of winter are replaced by colours generally not associated with Canadian winters. I chose to still label the painting Icicle Land, as the landscape is recognizable and typically Canadian.

Summer. Fall. Winter. Gatineau Park is the place to be.

Biking or hiking on the trails of Gatineau Park, snowshoeing through its forests or simply climbing to the top of the Gatineau Hills overlooking the city and breathing in fresh air. that is the beauty of the National Capital region.

Fall Rhapsody is a vernissage at the Gordon Harrison Canadian Landscape Gallery I look forward to each year.

One of the fondest memories I cherish to this day was an elderly man who walked into the Gallery on a Sunday afternoon, sat on the bench and got lost in Forest Symphony for a good hour. When I approached him again, with tears rolling down his face, he looked at me and said: “Thank you for allowing me to see this painting. It is so beautiful. You have no idea how beautiful it is and the memories it brings to me. Thank you.” He left with tears. but happy tears…

There is something magical about fall colours. its red colours may not last for long but it sure brings people outdoors to enjoy our beautiful landscapes.

Gatineau Park offers several scenic lookouts but by far, Champlain Lookout is the most spectacular. The lookout is located at the edge of the 300-metre high Eardley Escarpment allowing a bird’s eye view of the Ottawa River Valley. This collection of work captures the view from the lookout on a warm summer’s day in early July when the skies are clear and the sun’s rays are visible upon the fields of green and yellow/gold below. That same view was recaptured from a fall perspective showcasing the beauty of our Canadian landscape as it changes seasons.

North of the Ottawa River are les Collines-de-l'Outaouais. a rolling landscape with farm fields, little villages with church steeples, peaceful lakes and one of my favourite trees. white birches.

Lac Blanche is a collection that means a lot to me. I was commissioned by the former honourable Ambassador of the United States of America and his wife, David and Julie Jacobson, to do a painting of Lac Blanche as they were drawn to the fall colours and white birches. I am particularly proud as Phil and I had the opportunity to get to know the family and were pleased that they chose a Canadian artist to add to their private art collection while they resided in Ottawa. Today the painting hangs proudly beside another Harrison in their home in Chicago. Lac Blanche was unveiled at the opening of the Gordon Harrison Canadian Landscape Gallery.

Thank you Julie and David. may Lac Blanche always bring fond memories of your stay in Canada.

Blueberry Island is a private island on 31 Mile Lake in the Collines-de-l'Outaouais. I had the opportunity to visit and photograph the island and found it to be extremely picturesque and worthy of painting. It has all the essential elements of the Canadian landscape: its rocky shoreline, tall white pines, and is surrounded by the crystal blue waters of a northern lake. The pines are the principal stakeholder and the sweeping boughs play havoc across the canvas.

I was commissioned by a client to capture on canvas the landscape of their property on Blueberry Island. As seen from the paintings in this collection, it was winter time and I spent much of the day exploring the island, taking photographs and walking on the ice to capture the beautiful white pine trees which form its landscape. When people see this collection, their first thought is that the paintings are from their own blueberry island as we discovered that every country lake has its own blueberry island.

The archipelago of les Îles-de-la-Madeleine is located in the middle of the Gulf of St-Lawrence. The air is pure and sweet on these islands and they are interconnected by long, thin sand dunes that form an oasis containing emerald clear bodies of water. This painting depicts one of these enclosed ponds. As far as the eye can see, the islands and the dunes seem to blend, break apart and then stretch out from view as though deposited there by the whims of the sea. One can recognize the dunes and water, however, the horizon placement at the upper portion of the canvas and the horizontal simplicity of the subject matter allow the painting to have a contemporary look. The pastel colour palette is very representational of les Îles.

I remember one summer as a teenager visiting Lake O'Hara and climbing the trails up to Lake Oesa and spending the day beside this charming glacial lake nestled at the base of several tall mountain ranges.

Years later I ventured up this same trail, arriving a little more fatigued than I remembered, to discover the lake in June still covered in ice with the exception of a small patch of open water. I realized I was three weeks earlier than the first time I visited and that this made a huge difference as the lake is only ice free for a few short weeks of the year.

The beauty of this setting took my breath away for a second time.

The first painting I sold from my western Canada collection was from Yoho. Suddenly Emerald Water. I remember specifically the young man who purchased it for his bride to be as a wedding present. He purchased it almost a year before getting married and came to the house to pick it up a few days before the wedding.

This client loves to buy a painting for all of her grandchildren. Her husband fell in love with this painting and it eventually found its way to the home of one of her daughters in Europe.

Whistler Blackcomb offers skiers and hikers a spectacular view of Canada from the top of its ski mountains and glaciers.

I decided to join a group and venture out to the top of Whistler Blackcomb Mountain and its glacier when I visited in June, 2011. Outfitted with a steel pick, cleats, a rope and helmet, off I went. I was mesmerized by the beauty of these glaciers and very proud of myself for finding the courage to take photographs while we crisscrossed the very steep, icy terrain on the Glacier Walk.

This collection of work is very representative of western Canada. We are so lucky to have such distinctive beauty in our Canadian landscapes. so different from one coast to another.

In 1971, as a teenager, I wanted to discover the western landscapes. I was fortunate to work there one summer as a bus boy at the Banff Springs Hotel.

In the afternoons I would venture out into the mountains with my sketch pad and soft pastels. These are the only paintings I still have from that period of my life. I treasure them immensely and every time I talk about my journey, I bring these along with me.

I recall on one particular day, that although the skies were overcast, I still decided to hitchhike to Moraine Lake and the Valley of the Ten Peaks. yes, those were the days. I found a spot at the head of the lake and during the time I was sketching, a gentle mist fell on my sketch paper and made imprints on the white surface. To this day, I can look at this pastel sketch and re-live those moments sitting sketching to my heart's content.

During my 2009 trip out West, Phil and I visited the exact spot where I sat many years earlier. Memories…

While travelling from Lake Louise to Jasper National Park, Phil and I frequently slowed down the car to negotiate a herd of big-horn sheep or mountain goats travelling across the highway. Their numbers are abundant along this mountainous route. These animals are larger than I had envisioned and appeared completely at ease with all the motorists edging closer to enjoy a better view. If I was a wildlife photographer I would have had many photo opportunities that day. As a landscape artist I was in my element, for even in June, the mountain peaks were snow capped and stunning.

La Fondation des Auberges du cœur

The Gordon Harrison Canadian Landscape Gallery is proud to support Les Auberges du coeur Foundation.

As you know, Gordon and I support young people through the Art Inspiration Program we created in our schools.

We also support young homeless people in the community who are in need.

For the past 40 years, the foundation has provided financial support to young people in need and those who are homeless. Each year the foundation helps 3600 young people aged 12 to 35 years old.

Thank you for helping these young homeless people in need and happy holidays to you and your family.

— Phil and Gordon

Help Les Auberges du coeur Foundation to support young people who are in need or homeless between the ages of 12 and 35 by making a donation and getting a chance to win this beautiful original painting by award winning Canadian landscape artist Gordon Harrison.

Draw by the Foundation takes place on January 22 2025.

We invite you to make a donation to this non-profit foundation and get a chance to win this beautiful original oil painting from award-winning Canadian landscape artist Gordon Harrison. The funds go directly from you to the foundation.

Win this painting by making a donation to Auberges du coeur Foundation apprentices and art inspiration journey – the artist's legacy

Gordon Harrison and his life partner Gallerist Phil Emond, created two initiatives to inspire people in Canada and across the world.

Together they created an Art Inspiration Journey to inspire children in schools to appreciate art and the Canadian landscape by hearing Gordon's story and about his love for the Canadian landscape and preparing their own exhibit.

The artist also shares his passion with people who join him through one-on-one painting coaching days, seasonal weekly group lessons and art retreats at his studios in Ottawa and the Laurentians.

Art makes a difference in people's lives. It connects people. It reminds you to take a moment and travel to that one secret place inside all of us that is ours and makes us smile. Life, for us, is about knowing you have made a difference.

He's been called the eighth member of the Group of Seven. Harrison has worked hard to avoid the cliché of the starving artist only to have his genius recognized posthumously. He has the potential to be one of Canada's most important painters.

Mark Anderson
Ottawa Citizen, 2009

Canadian landscape inspires Gordon Harrison's work and his life.

Gordon Harrison is in a happy place following his heart, awakening his senses in a landscape playground. He has developed into one of Canada's foremost landscape painters. That ease of expression has been a long-time gift.

Lost in a world of colour and possibility where paint swirls in celebration of Canadian landscape, that little boy who once was lost for words has much to express about the beautiful planet. Painting has given him a voice and art lovers everywhere are listening.

Joel Haslam,
Canadian Television Network

Gordon Harrison is a man of many parts, all of which have combined to make him one of the most successful Canadian landscape painters working today.

Harrison literally revels in colour and at times it is as if he has created his own vocabulary to describe the Canadian landscape. There are aspects of his work which do remind you of the Group of Seven but they are difficult to pin down. It could be the density of emotion hidden in his work or the complexity of the draftsmanship involved in creating his very unique works of art.

Canadian landscape inspires Gordon Harrison's work and his life.

Gordon Harrison is in a happy place following his heart, awakening his senses in a landscape playground. He has developed into one of Canada's foremost landscape painters. He followed his passion choosing to study Landscape Architecture at the University of Toronto.

In 2016, he received an international award as best solo artist at New York International Art Expo. In 2014, he received a national award at the national painting contest, Rêves d'automne in Baie Saint-Paul (Quebec). In 2010, he was asked to speak and share his journey at the National Gallery of Canada.

His work is available at the Gordon Harrison Canadian Landscape Gallery in Ottawa, in Saint-Sauveur and, at the artist's bed & breakfast in the Laurentians, as well as at other fine art galleries across Canada.

The artist is strongly connected to his community and shares his technique with people from all around the world through one-on-one coaching sessions and art retreats and through the Art Inspiration Project created for youngsters.

the international open books project 2016

The International Open Books project started in Wales with artist and curator Mary Husted, and has travelled artistically from there to England, Australia, Hong Kong and China, adding new artists in each place, and enlarging the artistic conversation and interpretation each of them brings. As the exhibition moves to Canada this September, 2016, thirteen of our own artists will each contribute their individual artistic talent and interpretations to this blossoming international dialogue about the Chinese folding book.

Gordon Harrison's interpretation will carry on his tradition of using oil paints to render the endless and breathtaking Canadian landscape. From east to west and on to the north, Gordon interprets what he sees in an ever changing seasonal environment of land, trees, water, mountain and sky. Awards and tributes have not dulled his sense of wonder and respect for the grandeur of these marvels across the country; nor has his success as a respected and celebrated artist, here and abroad, altered his infectious enthusiasm for his work and his chosen subjects. We are all delighted that Gordon made the time to be part of this major international initiative. His presence gives the exhibition prestige and prominence. Thank you, Gordon.

In June 2015, I went back to Atlantic Canada to hear and feel the poetry offered by its sea, fishing dories, harbours and unique landscapes. I was back revisiting this beautiful region of Canada years later. The towns may have changed a bit but the sea still tells the same story — that of tranquility, beauty and endless horizon. How I missed it.

In 2012 and 2013, Gordon Harrison and his partner Gallerist Phil Émond offered a unique experience to people in their community who had painted with Gordon Harrison: exhibits showcasing the talent of these apprentices, allowing them to experience life as an artist, to exhibit and sell their Canadian landscapes in a gallery. We are proud to repeat this wonderful experience in 2015.

> "Being one of Gordon's apprentices has been an amazing and uplifting experience. I would have never imagined that two of my paintings would be hung in a prestigious art gallery. To be coached and to paint alongside with Gordon was a wonderfully eye opening and rewarding experience."

Gordon Harrison is one of the 20 great Canadian artists juried to partake in the official opening of one the most attended symposiums in Canada. The 20 artists will paint a street in Baie Saint-Paul and showcase their collection of paintings for sale. Baie Saint-Paul is "the" art capital of Canada. Walk down Jean-Baptiste street and discover some of the greatest Canadian artists, galleries and cafes. The scenery of Baie Saint-Paul will take your breath away. It is where some of the greatest artists have painted – Marc-Aurel Fortin, Jean-Paul Lemieux, René Richard and members of the Group of Seven.

In 2012, Gordon Harrison and his partner Gallerist Phil Émond offered a unique experience to people in their community who had painted with Gordon Harrison. The exhibit showcased the talent of 26 apprentices, allowing them to experience life as an artist and to exhibit and sell their Canadian landscapes in a gallery. We are proud to repeat this wonderful experience in 2013.

"Being one of Gordon's apprentices has been an amazing and uplifting experience. I would have never imagined that two of my paintings would be hung in a prestigious art gallery. To be coached and to paint alongside with Gordon was a wonderfully eye opening and rewarding experience."

gordon harrison art inspiration project

The Gordon Harrison Art Inspiration Project was created by Canadian landscape artist Gordon Harrison and his partner, Gallerist Phil Émond, in 2009.

"Inspiring young people to pursue their artistic talent and to discover the beauty of our Canadian landscapes is part of the artist's legacy." Teacher at Turnbull School

Through this inspirational journey, students from visual art programs experience "life as an artist" working with Gordon Harrison and create an exhibition of Canadian landscapes.

In 2009-10, the gallery hosted an exhibition of "The Colours of Canada — Coast to Coast" that showcased Canadian landscapes painted by the 41 grade 8 students from Turnbull School who participated in this journey. Proceeds were donated to United Way. Special thanks to Sally Swan, who walked into the gallery on a Friday evening and made this dream come true.

In 2010-11, the gallery is proud to have inspired 36 students from grade 3, 4 and 5 from Counterpoint Academy. The students' work was part of an art auction to raise funds for the Jump Rope for Heart and Stroke Foundation. Special thanks to Marleen Campbell.

In 2011-12, 20 grade 6 students from Ashbury College experienced life as an artist. Funds were raised to contribute to the new Creative Learning Center. Special thanks to Elisabeth Arbuckle and Kendal Young.

In 2012-13, grade 3 and 4 students from D Roy Kennedy Public School created "The Beauty of Canada". Proceeds will be donated to Camp Maple Leaf. Special thanks to Mary-Ann Quist, teacher and the students for sharing this beautiful journey with us.

Gordon Harrison

The Laurentian Collection

Gordon Harrison has developed into of this country's most renowned contemporary landscape painters. Described as a "celebration of colour", his impressive collections are inspired by the striking vistas from his travels across Canada. Mainly self taught, he was highly influenced by one of Canada's foremost artists, Quebec's Jean-René Richard (1895-1982).

"He's been called the eighth member of the Group of Seven, Harrison has worked hard to avoid the cliché of the starving artist only to have his genius recognized posthumously. He has the potential to be one of Canada's most important painters."
-Mark Anderson, Ottawa Citizen, 2009

Please be sure to join us as Petroff Gallery hosts an exciting 4 day Vernissage event for Gordon Harrison, exhibiting his new collection from the Laurentian region in Québec.

Paintings priced from $350-$1200. All proceeds go directly to the artists and a 5% donation to H'Art of Ottawa, a unique and innovative art studio where through the common language of art and self-expression, artists with developmental disabilities contribute to the community and the cultural life of Ottawa.

painting coaching at the artist's studio in ottawa and the laurentians

Whether you are looking for coaching as an artist, are a budding artist and wish to learn more, or desire to have the experience of creating a personal piece of art even if you have never painted, Gordon offers you a unique opportunity. Join the artist on weekdays or weekends at his studio in New Edinburgh in Ottawa as well as Pine Point Lake House, the artist's studio in Ste-Marguerite-du-Lac-Masson in the Laurentians and paint your favourite landscape. The artist will paint the very same scene as you and will take you through each step of his creation process, from sketching to painting the scene.

one-on-one day session $375 for a day. Includes all supplies and lunch. You leave with your art work.

10 week class sessions in ottawa Join a small group at the artist's studio in ottawa and paint once a week for a three hour session. Sessions offered in spring, fall and winter. $600 plus supplies.

one week art retreat in the laurentians The artist offers a one week painting coaching experience at his Laurentian residence in July and August. This retreat includes sketching and painting outdoors, accommodations, meals, entertainment and a vernissage of your work. A wonderful relaxing opportunity whether you have never painted or are a professional artist. $1000 - $1600 per person based on type of accommodations.

GORDON HARRISON'S GALLERY HAS GROWN, AND SO HAS HIS ART

Ottawa Citizen | By PETER SIMPSON | October 21, 2010

Gordon Harrison's former art gallery was 300 square feet. I've seen paintings that were bigger.

No surprise then that Harrison has moved to a new space on Sussex Drive, more than five times the size of the Murray Street gallery he has occupied, exclusively, for several years.

His partner and gallery director Phil Émond was walking on Sussex a while back when he passed what was until recently the Carisse Studio Café and noticed the "for lease" sign in the window. Émond leased the space. When the deal was done, he brought a fancy bottle of champagne to a dinner party and announced to surprised guests — and a surprised Harrison — that the gallery was moving around the corner to Sussex and what is, perhaps, Ottawa's most exclusive clutch of shops.

"I saw the 'for lease' sign and said, 'Sussex? You can't go wrong on Sussex when you've got the National Gallery on Sussex," Émond says during an interview in the gallery on Monday afternoon. "And we've got so many beautiful galleries on Sussex." (Most notable is the Terence Robert Gallery, one block to the south, which, coincidentally, also has a vernissage this Friday of Canadian landscapes, by the Ottawa painter Philip Craig. Watch for a column on that show on Saturday.)

Harrison and Émond sit in the gallery and their enthusiasm for the new space and the new venture — for the first time, Émond is managing other artists and exhibiting their art at the new gallery — bubbles through.

"It's good for Gordon to feel a little bit of competition with his art, and to bring in other artists," Émond says.

He smiles, and concedes, "I'm more competitive than I thought I was. . . I didn't think I would be, but I am."

Émond interjects. "Gordon would call the gallery daily to see if a painting had sold, and he wanted to ensure it was a Gordon Harrison painting that sold first."

"No," Harrison says, though not forcefully.

"I've managed Gordon's art for years, so now it's an opportunity to branch out and manage other artists," Émond says. "It's a whole new world out there to manage other artists. What we're trying to create here is a real artistic sense of community."

There are four other artists showing at the new gallery. Catherine Vamvakas Lay is from Toronto and does vibrantly coloured blown glass. Césan d'Ornellas Levine is from Toronto and has loose acrylics on wood that seem almost folk art-ish, until you notice the detail. Peter Colbert is from Oakville, and his oils flirt with and sometimes embrace abstraction. Patricia Kirby, who works at the gallery, is an Ottawa artist who does watercolours and pastels on birch board. While I usually find watercolours to be underwhelming, Kirby's are distinct. The media is opaque enough to allow the natural grain of the birch board to become part of the works, as the natural curve and swirl of the grain defines and animates her skies.

There could be more artists in the gallery, as Émond and Harrison are open to submissions of Canadian landscapes. They both remember what it was like to be knocking on gallery doors asking for wall space, and they're determined to give their associate artists the representation, marketing, guidance and exposure they need. "We can do for them what we wanted galleries to do for us," Émond says.

Through all the change and expansion, the name remains the same — the Gordon Harrison Gallery — and most of the art on the walls of the two-level space still comes from the hand of Harrison. At the moment, the focus is on his new collection of fall paintings, culled from travels east and west, though home is where his artistic heart is.

"I always seem to come back to the local landscapes," he says. "You really get the striking reds and oranges just here in our own backyard."

It's perhaps best displayed in four paintings titled Forest Symphony, which testify to Harrison's changing technique and style. "It was beech trees and maple trees and it was a windy day, and I tried to capture the two trees sort of playing with one another, the branches of the tree sort of reaching out and touching one another."

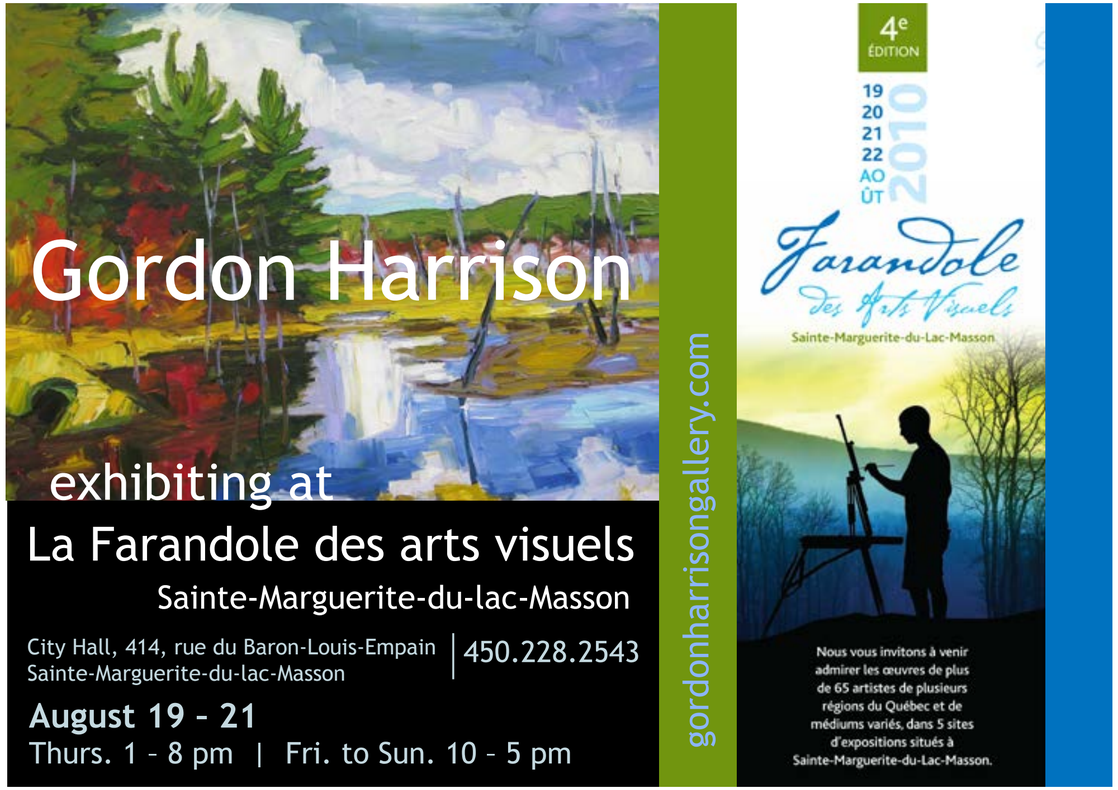

The paintings are not abstract, but they're looser and built of broader brushstrokes than most of his earlier work.

"I think my work has changed," Harrison says. "There's been an evolution and I see the evolution. I think it's purely from confidence I've gained in my subject matter, confidence in my brush strokes, and just personal confidence."

Selling a lot of paintings is a confidence builder, and Harrison has a dedicated clientele. His admirers include the current U.S. ambassador to Canada, David Jacobson, and his wife Julie. They'll be at the official opening of the gallery Friday, when Harrison will unveil a large Canadian landscape commissioned by Mrs. Jacobson. "She's excited!" Émond says.

She's not the only one. "It's a perfect location," Harrison says, as he sits and looks out over Sussex Drive. " I don't think you could improve on this location."

Well, there is that infuriating, summer-long construction on Sussex, which has been forcing the bravest pedestrians into an obstacle course that could train Navy Seals, but the work is almost complete.

"A passion for the beauty Canada offers in its forested landscapes, rocky shorelines, sweeping valleys and enchanting communities."

The Gordon Harrison Art Inspiration Project was created by the artist and his partner, Gallery Director Phil Emond, in 2009.

Inspiring young people to pursue their artistic talent and discover the beauty of our Canadian landscapes is part of the artist's legacy.

The Gallery invites you to a silent auction and fund raising event in support of the art program at Turnbull School. Hear about the project and view the wonderful work from our 41 grade 8 emerging artists from Turnbull School. Bids start at $20.

All proceeds will go to Turnbull School to fund its art program. Ten percent of the sales of Gordon Harrison's Canadian landscapes that weekend will help fund the Gordon Harrison Art Inspiration Project in 2010.

Born in Montréal, Gordon Harrison showed an interest in art at an early age. Enthralled by the natural world surrounding him, he followed his passion choosing to study Landscape Architecture at the University of Toronto.

Mainly self-taught, Gordon has studied at the Ottawa School of Art and was highly influenced by one of Canada's foremost artists, Québec's Jean-René Richard (1895-1982). He produces impressive collections of Canadian landscapes from his travels across Canada. He is also often commissioned by clients to put their most memorable views on canvas. Gordon paints both in his studios, and at his country home in the Laurentians.

Gordon's work is described as a "celebration of colour." His bold use of colour, his unique skies and picturesque destinations evoke an emotional response from the viewer as he creates a mood in each painting. His uninhibited use of colour and the Canadian landscape as his chosen subject matter often compare his work to the Group of Seven; yet he maintains his very own unique style.

"I refer to my art as 'Impressionism-Realism'; my brush strokes are broad, loose and intense, yet my subject matter remains clear."

Gordon Harrison finds inspiration and colour in Canadian landscapes that he discovers through his travels across Canada and shares his experiences in the expression of his art. He has a passion for the beauty Canada offers in its forested landscapes, rocky shorelines, sweeping valleys and enchanting communities. He uses these destinations as his inspiration, recreating them through his own vision.

"Having my work exhibited in my own Gallery, at the McMichael Canadian Art Gallery, in international art fairs, as well as other fine art galleries across Canada is an honour. Knowing that my work is part of our Canadian culture and heritage and is viewed and collected across the world gives me a great feeling of accomplishment as a Canadian artist."

VISIT THE ARTIST'S STUDIOS IN OTTAWA AND THE LAURENTIANS

We invite you to visit the artist at his studios in the New Edinburgh community in Ottawa and in Sainte-Marguerite-du-lac-Masson in the Laurentians, located 20 minutes from Saint-Sauveur. Additional work is available at the studios.

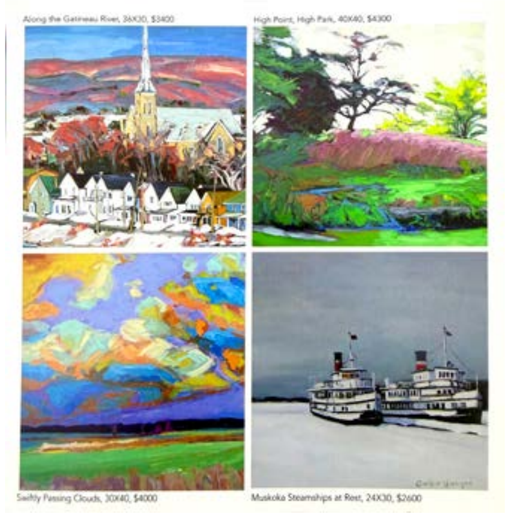

The artist's studio in Ottawa is a heritage building built in 1898 which originally served as the gardener's cottage for the original owner, Alexander Lumsden, a log contractor. The studio has been the "home" of the artist since 2002. It is where the artist puts his passion onto canvas. The Laurentians is where the artist finds great inspiration in the landscapes that have surrounded him at a very early age. In 1902, Gordon's great grandfather who was an entrepreneur exchanged a piano for land. Four generations later, the family continues to enjoy quiet and relaxing times on the lake.

ANNUAL GARDEN EXHIBIT AT THE ARTIST'S STUDIO

The Spring vernissage is a special happening in the community held on the first weekend in June each year. The event is much enjoyed by art collectors, our clients and the public. The art finds a new home for a few days in the gardens surrounding the studio as one follows the artist's recent travels through his art and enjoys a glass of wine, appetizers and live music from local talented musicians.

The Twelve Days of Winter

Thank You!

Thank you for visiting us at the gallery, at my studio in New Edinburgh, in other galleries outside Ottawa and joining us at art events in 2008.

2008 was an exciting year for us. A new milestone was set as my work was joined and exhibited at the McMichael Gallery...the gallery of Canadian art...a gallery that inspired me as a young child.

Returning to visit Western Canada, where at the age of 15 I worked as a busboy at Chateau Lake Louise, provided wonderful inspiration and memories of my earlier days when I sketched the mountains.

We also brought together 4 cousin galleries in the Byward market and our gallery now offers a walking tour of the galleries by promoting the diversity and beauty of art Ottawa offers.

2009 will also bring new ventures for us. Inspiring children to pursue their artistic talent will be our main focus as we work with children in visual art and literature programs. On February 26 we leave to exhibit my work at New York Art Expo.

Thank you for supporting my passion. Your support gives me the feeling of great accomplishments as a Canadian artist.

The Gordon Harrison Team wishes you a safe and joyous holiday season.

"A passion for the beauty Canada offers in its forested landscapes, rocky shorelines, sweeping valleys and enchanting communities"

Born in Montréal, Gordon Harrison showed an interest in art at an early age. Enthralled by the natural world surrounding him, he followed his passion choosing to study Landscape Architecture at the University of Toronto.

Mainly self-taught, Gordon has studied at the Ottawa School of Art and was highly influenced by one of Canada's foremost artists, Québec's Jean-René Richard (1895-1982). He produces impressive collections of Canadian landscapes from his travels across Canada. He is also often commissioned by clients to put their most memorable views on canvas.

Gordon's work is described as a "celebration of colour." His bold use of colour, his unique skies and picturesque destinations evoke an emotional response from the viewer as he creates a mood in each painting. His uninhibited use of colour and the Canadian landscape as his chosen subject matter often compare his work to the Group of Seven; yet he maintains his very own unique style.

"I refer to my art as 'Impressionism-Realism': my brush strokes are broad, loose and intense, yet my subject matter remains clear."

Gordon Harrison finds inspiration and colour in Canadian landscapes that he discovers through his travels across Canada and shares his experiences in the expression of his art. He has a passion for the beauty Canada offers in its forested landscapes, rocky shorelines, sweeping valleys and enchanting communities. He uses these destinations as his inspiration, recreating them through his own vision.

"Having my work exhibited in my own Gallery, at the McMichael Canadian Art Gallery as well as other fine art galleries across Canada is an honour. Knowing that my work is part of our Canadian culture and heritage and is viewed and collected across the world gives me a great feeling of accomplishment as a Canadian artist."
